Create macros and easily apply them to any text editor. KEYMACRO is a freeware utility, which is 100% safe to use and can be freely distributed. Price: Free DOWNLOAD 01-01-2018, 03:33 PM HKECHAR Wow! I couldn't believe my eyes when I came across this great tool, that saves me time and effort, when it comes to the tedious task of adding texts with color codes to each of my site's articles. I used to do it manually by copying and pasting the texts into the specified text boxes. In fact, I was so happy when I found out that this tool has a free version. It's very user friendly and comes with a simple and plain layout. But I'm afraid I'll have to get the paid version if I want to add the texts in color. This tool is indeed a godsend! 01-02-2018, 04:34 PM McBarr Thanks for the comments! It's a pity you can't use the free version with color codes. Although it's simple and straightforward, the colorizer does have a lot of features. But unfortunately, only a paid version is available now. 01-03-2018, 11:05 AM Silent_Violator I've tried a few different tools over the years. The one I've been using is a colorizer, that puts color codes in the source code of my web pages. It allows me to change the color code of any one of the lines in a page. The most common use is to change the colors of the links in my blog, but it works great on any website. One of the features I like the most, is that it allows me to select text that has already been coded, to apply the same color code to it, without it being modified. There's no free version. The only one you can get, is a paid version with a few different color packs, or you can use the one provided by the creator. The first thing I did, was to try SC Calendar Cracked 2022 Latest Version. I've downloaded the trial version, that's allowed me to save and open files, but had not been able to add or remove calendars, clocks, and dates from my system. When I tried the full version, that was available for download, I was able to add calendars, clocks, and dates, but not save and open files, which was the 81e310abbf

GoatCounter is a freeware utility to monitor and analyze network traffic. It provides useful features such as the support for port forwarding. GoatCounter can be used as a proxy server with easy configuration, even on a low-end PC. It is an ideal tool for network security as it can reveal many information about the target and the traffic. GoatCounter can monitor and track network traffic based on established rules such as whether a certain data field has exceeded a specific size, the specific protocol or the IP or MAC address of a host. Key features of GoatCounter: • Unique rule mechanism for monitoring and analyzing network traffic. • Supports forwarding through a proxy server and compresses packet data. • Supports Firewall, hosts, servers, ports, and FTP. • Characteristics of TCP/IP and UDP (ICMP). • Logs data with GUI and in text files. • Can set a large number of parameters for real-time monitoring. • Can produce detailed graphs of network traffic. • Intuitive graphical user interface. • Can operate in the background. • Supports multiple concurrent sessions. • Supports 3rd-party rules. How to install and use GoatCounter: This software can be easily installed. 1) Double-click GoatCounter.exe and then follow the onscreen instructions. 2) At the main interface, click "Start" and then "Options" and then "Programs" on the "Startup" tab. 3) Select "GoatCounter" in the list of applications and click "Apply". 4) Close the options dialog box. Troubleshooting No rule for your IP Address GoatCounter starts a new connection to each specified IP address, regardless of whether you specify it. For example, if the host is specified as 192.168.1.1, a new connection will be established to each host on the network from 192.168.1.1 to 192.168.1.254. This can be specified by adding an additional port number after the host. For example, if the host is specified as 192.168.1.1, a new connection will be established to each host on the network from 192.168.1.1 to 192.168.1.254, and the TCP port number will be set to TCP/80. GoatCounter could be hard to debug if this is the issue. The best way to identify the issue is by running GoatCounter from a command prompt in a Windows command window, or to examine the program's log file. Running GoatCounter from a command prompt may reveal a value greater than the maximum packet size set in the Options window, or it could reveal several IPv6 addresses that don't match your configured IPv6 addresses. GoatCounter has an option to send email to alert users to a packet size exceeding the configured limit. This is helpful
