An attack was launched against the German-occupied Netherlands on 15 September 1944 (the Feast of Our Lady). The Allied troops quickly advanced through the Netherlands in what was to be known as the Timelapse Offensive. The Allies then took the towns of Nijmegen, Beveland, and Breda on 16 September. The German defenders were pushed back to Arnhem and, after three days of fierce fighting, eventually fell back to the river Maas on 21 September. The Allies then launched an assault on the Duitse Binnenwold, the road, rail and canal belt that provided a supply route to the German-held Antwerp. The Allies went on to capture the fortified port city of Antwerp on 4 October. Participating in the offensive

This invention relates to adhesive compositions, and more particularly, to polymerizable adhesive compositions which can be applied in the form of an uncured bonding resin, thinned to form a set adhesive film for laminating thermoplastic articles such as heat-sealable articles, and then polymerized by an ultraviolet radiation (UV) radiation to form a hard durable polymer. The use of adhesive compositions as a means of joining thermoplastic articles together is well known. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 3,890,456 describes the use of a mixture of ethylene/vinyl acetate copolymer and polymethyl methacrylate (PMMA) to join together a laminar structure composed of polyethylene and polymethyl methacrylate or polymethyl methacrylate with an adhesive layer such as polyethylene. Similarly, U.S. Pat. No. 3,732,301 teaches that when a thermoplastic film such as polyethylene is laminated to a normally more rigid sheet such as polymethyl methacrylate, it is advantageous if the adhesive is softer and more elastomeric than the laminated layers. Many systems exist for joining a polyethylene with a polymethyl methacrylate laminate. One method of joining is by crimping the laminate and/or the polyethylene film to a metal or other hard substrate. A more recent laminating system utilizes an adhesive based on polyvinyl acetate and polyethylene. A method for such joining is described in U.S. Pat. No. 3,913,842 which mentions certain vinyl esters of 1,2-epoxy-3-lyxanthines as useful. Recently, attempts have been made to use the adhesive properties of polystyrene. For example, U.S. Pat. No. 4,126,763 teaches that a composition comprising polystyrene, styrene/maleic anhydride copolymer and vinyl acetate, when joined with a polyethylene layer, is useful in producing laminate structures. U.S. Pat. No. 4,177,205 describes the use of a styrene/maleic anhydride copolymer as a component in an adhesive composition to join polystyrene sheet to an adjacent polyethylene lamina. U.S. Pat
