careers. Kinski: The Last Star of the German Cinema is based on a collection of previously unseen correspondence between film director Klaus Kinski, his wife Johanna, and the deceased actor's longtime friend and colleague, director Rainer Werner Fassbinder. Movingly shot from archival footage, archive and posthumous material, and included in the film are interviews with the director, his wife and co-star Ute Lemper; interviews with the subject's children, Georg and Christiana; interviews with Jula Hoigis (producer), Alexander Popov (cinematographer), Klaus Weinkath (analogue soundman), Otto Stein (editor) and Christian Görner (sound engineer), Ronald J. Weiss (assistant director), and Thomas Endres (assistant editor), and interviews with Fassbinder cast members including Ute Lemper, Rene Wegener, Wotan Wilke Möhring, Nina Hagen, Pia Braus and Michael Ende. In this great achievement of oral history, director Fassbinder interprets the letters between Fassbinder and Kinski and projects the inner motives and thoughts of the two leading personalities of contemporary German cinema.
