Q: Construct a bijective map $f:\mathbb{P}^n_k \rightarrow \mathbb{P}^1_k$. Construct a bijective map $f:\mathbb{P}^n_k \rightarrow \mathbb{P}^1_k$. I was thinking about thinking about about the definition of a bijection but in general how does one do this? A: Select a linear subspace Δ that is not contained in the indeterminacy of f and map an arbitrary point p to the line it spans. Q: How to check a CheckBox inside ListViewItem of ListView in C# windows application? I have a ListView inside a Popup Window. I am filling this ListView with a list from a database. At the end of the row I want to show a CheckBox (instead of an Image). Now I am struggling to find a correct way how to bind this (I mean the checkbox) to the corresponding row. My current way is using a Tag as property of the ListViewItem. But I don't know how to check the checkbox according to the Tag. Any ideas? UPDATE: Thanks for your speedy answers. How can I get directly the string of the data i.e. the CheckBox's text? A: You can create an event handler for the CheckBox Checked event inside the ItemTemplate of the ListView and, inside the event handler, you can check if the item's Tag property has a specific value and if so then set the item's checked state: private void MyListViewItem_Checked(object sender, RoutedEventArgs e) { var listViewItem = sender as ListViewItem; var checkBox = e.OriginalSource

This application relates to poly(tetrafluoroethylene) and poly(tetrafluoroethylene-co-vinylamine) polymers, processes for their preparation, and to articles prepared from such polymers. Poly(tetrafluoroethylene) (PTFE) and related copolymers have been known for some time. European Patent Application, Publication No. 0 103 303 (Berg et al., June 1984) discloses a low shrinkage, high modulus melt processable PTFE which contains about 25% by weight of a vinylamine moiety. Typical reported moduli for melt processable PTFE-based alloys are in the range of up to 30,000 psi (228 MPa) (35 Ksi). U.S. Pat. No. 3,953,566 (Provost et al., May 4, 1976) describes a process for making PTFE by contacting tetrafluoroethylene with a perfluorovinylamine to provide a melt processable polymer which is then coagulated to provide a dry particulate polymer of low powder bulk density. U.S. Pat. No. 4,187,315 (Issued Feb. 5, 1980) discloses a process for producing a sintered body by molding or sintering microspheres of melt processable PTFE in the presence of a coagulant selected from certain perfluoroalkyl ethylene oxide polymers. The PTFE is reported to have a fluorine content of about 16% by weight. U.S. Pat. No. 4,260,654 (issued Apr. 7, 1981) discloses a process for making high modulus, highly PTFE-containing materials in which a masterbatch of a low melt viscosity, PTFE-based polymer is prepared with a finely divided, high modulus, PTFE-containing fibrillatable polymer. The masterbatch polymer contains at least 10 weight percent of PTFE. U.S. Pat. No. 4,314,021 (issued Feb. 9, 1982) discloses blends of PTFE with homopolymers and copolymers of vinylidene fluoride, of vinyl chloride, and of vinyl fluoride. The blends are reported to be somewhat less processable than PTFE at temperatures below 325.degree. C. U.S. Pat.
