Final installment of the Flappatron saga Chapter 8: Journey of a Thousand Meals "Opa! Opa!" a little cry of joy echoed through the streets as Chewy and Bright, their parents, appeared at the end of the garden path leading to the house. Chewy gave a joyful wave and Bright gave a modest lift of her tail. Chewy stopped to rub Bright's belly as they followed her parents up to the house. Happy sounds came from inside, from their mother and father's mouths as they settled down on the sofa with their little family. The three of them looked like a pile of springy dough as Chewy bounded on Bright and Sprinkles like a ballerina on pointe. They all lay on their side and cuddled close together, never to be parted again. All around them the sounds of a happy home could be heard. Chewy's eyes shone with joy and mischief, happy for her parents to be back, safe from the dungeon of Doocybots. Not everybody believed in the Doocybots. I still love you even if you jump first.' 'Yep,' Sprinkles said, 'in a few short weeks, you all became old friends. We helped each other through rough and tumble times, didn't we?' Chewy giggled and Bright opened her eyes and looked over at her brother. He lay next to them, snuggled against his parents. He looked more beautiful than ever. Bright knew that in a few short weeks, she would be a spitting image of him. A splash came from the downstairs bathroom as a turd led a journey, a circuitous journey, of a thousand meals. The
