When you import an image into Photoshop, you should consider what you need from it. When editing a photograph, for example, you use layers to add visual effects. When cropping or removing items from a photograph, you use the tool with the ruler or magnetic lasso or crop tool, respectively. You can use these techniques with other image-editing software programs, but Photoshop is the most flexible and popular choice. Even though it's easy to start with Photoshop, you should experiment with other programs until you become familiar with the Photoshop workflow and find your personal style. For new Photoshop users, I recommend Layers and Layers panel Window Options in Chapter 3 to help you get started with layers. In this chapter, I introduce you to the Photoshop workspace by explaining what you can accomplish in Photoshop. I also take you through the basic tools in Photoshop to help you perform edits quickly and efficiently. I also show you some of the tools that empower you to create your own advanced edits. I finish this chapter with more on using layers, Layers panel window options, adjustment layers, Smart Objects, and the History panel.

Backing Up with Backups Nearly every Photoshop user has experienced the frustration of a botched edit. The image looks perfect in the software, but when you perform a test print or export to a digital format, you get the dreaded error message that the file is corrupt. Or perhaps you were working on a complex project and saved it with a format that you no longer use. In any case, image corruption means you have to start over. You can find many helpful tips on the web about saving different files, backing up your files, and a wide variety of other information about Adobe Photoshop. To start, be sure to backup your images regularly (see Book IV, Chapter 2 for tips), but as a starting point, know that your photos will probably be safe with different versions of Photoshop, your operating system, and a reliable external hard drive. I recommend that you back up your images to a computer that you can use in the event that your current computer is unresponsive or crashes, as well as a hard drive that is external to your computer. Having a file backup is a lifesaver because you won't have to start all over with a new project and purchase new software. If you're unable to use your current computer, turn to Book IV, Chapter 2, for information on how to back up your files to a secondary computer. Read on to find out what

In this post, you will learn how to create a dictionary from an image or video file in Adobe Photoshop Lightroom. Here is a list of reference materials that are useful for those wanting to practice. Save to Create a dictionary from an image or video

Open the image or video in Adobe Photoshop Lightroom Choose File > New > Dictionary Next, choose a file location on your computer and name your dictionary Choose Save to You have now created a dictionary from an image or video file Create a dictionary from a webcam video For this example, you will need a video camera and camcorder. You can use your webcam in your computer and, of course, use a camcorder to record a video. Go to Adobe Photoshop Lightroom to access your webcam or video camera. If you have a camera with a microphone, you can use that to record the sound. For a video camera, choose File > Record and choose video. Open the webcam or video in Adobe Photoshop

Lightroom. Choose File > New > Dictionary. Choose Save to Select the camera that will capture the sound and the camera that will capture the video, and then choose file location. If you are working on a picture that you took, you will want to choose File > Save Layers. After selecting File > Save Layers, the pictures will show you the adjustment layers that you have created. You can edit or delete some of the adjustment layers if you wish. Once you are satisfied that you want all the adjustment layers to be saved, go to File > Save as. Select File > Save As to save the file to the location that you choose. Step 1: The importance of tone and color You can use the adjustment layers to change the color and tone of your image. If you are making a portrait portrait of a person, you can use the Levels Adjustment Layer. If you are making a portrait of a flower, you can use the Curves Adjustment Layer. If you are making an abstract painting, you can use the Hue Saturation Adjustment Layer. 05a79cecff

Diana Nyad Reflects on Her 34-Hour Swim From Havana to Key West Receive the latest open-house updates in your inbox It took 32 years before 32-year-old Diana Nyad set a record for a woman alone: swimming the 110-mile course between Cuba and Key West. A rainy day gave way to a sunny one as the former "Miss World" swam again on Monday. This time she followed in the footsteps of Sylvia Earle, the 107-year-old octogenarian who made history on July 5, 1978. Earle swam the course in seven hours and 43 minutes. Nyad beat that by more than two hours, completing the event in six hours and 44 minutes. "It's been an amazing journey with the sea air fresh and the people very very welcoming," Nyad said. For Nyad, she said, the journey was more than just about setting a record. "This is an emotional moment. It's about the experience. It's not about the record. It's about this being the very first woman to swim from Cuba to America," she said. "It's been a breath of fresh air being able to talk to the people and have the experience. After 32 years, it's the first time and I'm so grateful for that. It's been amazing." Nyad said the only "disappointment" was that it rained. "The weather was fantastic, but it was a little disappointing because it was my first time in the water without a wetsuit since the age of 14. I want to be 100 percent there with my body fully prepared for the transition." Police began making calls to airports and highways near Miami after Nyad, who was wearing a neon green wetsuit, was the first to complete the journey under 48 hours. In addition to the oppressive humidity, she suffered from cramps, dehydration and sunburn. "I tell people that it wasn't easy," Nyad told the Associated Press. "You have to be properly conditioned and the thing you have to prepare for is the mental fatigue. At some points I felt like I was not in control of my life." At one point, after 16 hours, Nyad's breathing began to get sporadic. "I thought I might be in trouble," she said. "It gets to a point where you start to question

Reminder of the Turkish State The Berlin Conference of April 24-27, 1878 was an important step in the process of decomposing the Ottoman Empire. It was the first time Europe agreed on its own terms to grab territory from the Ottoman Empire. The Congress came up with a list of demands for the Muslim provinces. It was settled that these would be ceded to the treaty powers. The conditions of the Congress were met by the Treaty of San Stefano, signed on January 18, 1878. This treaty divided up the Balkan region in Europe and was meant to be a basis for future settlement of the Balkan issue. The Congress proclaimed that Montenegro, Macedonia, Southern Dobruja, Eastern Roumelia, Albania, Bosnia, Herzegovina, and Western Armenia, were to be parts of a future independent state. In addition, Bulgaria was extended further south. They also had colonies. The Greeks had Macedonia, and the Serbs were given a piece of the Bosnian territory as well. Turkey had to cede the Pashalik of Yanak, and agreed to a customs union with Russia. In the Treaty of Berlin, signed on September 3, 1878, Austria-Hungary and Russia had to sign a lease agreement for the middle of the Danube, with Austria-Hungary taking the north and Russia taking the south. The lease was to be used to transport goods from Austria-Hungary into Russia. This was to maintain transportation between the countries. However, Russia was not satisfied with the contract. They wanted more. They wanted much more. They demanded that the Ottoman provinces they had just received were to be returned to Turkey. This was unacceptable to the Austria-Hungarian government. They fought with Russia over this deal, causing the war. Years of war had been fought with Russia over regions of the Ottoman Empire. Both Russia and Austria-Hungary were supported in their actions by Italy. In addition, France and Britain openly supported Russia because of their fear of the Ottoman Empire. Germany did not openly support either. Germany signed an alliance with Russia on February 24, 1879, in the Treaty of Berlin. This alliance was specifically against Austria-Hungary. However, although the Russians were receiving support from England and France, Austria-Hungary was the winner in the conflict. The war had left Russia with bankrupt, and had destroyed the Black Sea grainfields. It had also left Germany the loser in the conflict. Russia was
