Put on your VR goggles and strap yourself in tight for the ultimate survival experience. This game has you run for your life as you run through the streets of Beijing or Istanbul on your way to avoid the crazed mobs of zombies. Your only weapons are a two handed blunderbuss that can only point in one direction, and a pair of non-directional flippers. You must use your wits and balance to avoid the hoard of zombies while evading the swipe-able police, who will follow you through the streets. If that were not enough of a challenge, you have no food, water or ammo, and you must work your way through the levels, one at a time. DISCLAIMER - This game is pure VR, and you're gonna have to push your way through the sometimes unpredictable movement / fight conditions with your head. Don't say we didn't warn you. Additional Note: This is the last High Society Costume for Momiji that will be available in Japan. Perceptions and experiences of alcohol users with head and neck cancer: a qualitative study. Existing quantitative literature indicates high levels of hazardous and harmful drinking among patients with head and neck cancer (HNC), although little is known about the relationship between hazardous drinking and the health of this patient group. A qualitative study was therefore undertaken to understand the behaviours of hazardous and harmful drinkers and their perceptions and experiences with alcohol. Semi-structured interviews were conducted with a purposive sample of nine hazardous and harmful drinkers with a history of HNC. Transcribed interviews were then analysed using content analysis. Alcohol was not described as a major problem for the participants. Participants perceived their alcohol consumption as being associated with meningitis, a sense of depression and being able to cope with the reality of their condition. Participants were unable to recall being given any information about the association between alcohol and HNC. The study did not enable the researcher to make a conclusive judgement about the potential impact of hazardous or harmful drinking on health. However, several recommendations have been made to improve clinical care. Nurses are able to identify patients who are drinking alcohol at hazardous or harmful levels and who may benefit from interventions to support their coping with HNC. Nurses also need to be aware of any perceived myths about alcohol and HNC. Matrix-isolated chlorophyll fluorescence as a sensitive probe of in situ antenna effects in chloroplasts: effects of temperature and incident light. Recently, we have shown that the primary photochemical events in isolated spinach chloroplasts can be monitored by monitoring the ratio of P700(+) to the plastosemiquinone radical

Hoplegs are a semi-hardside thrush in the bird family Muscicapidae. It is part of a group of five similar genera that share several similar plumage features. Four of these genera (Hemispingus, Myoponus, Poranius, and Certhiaxis) are geographically isolated in the Western Pacific Islands and Australia, whereas the subfamily Erythropygini, which also includes the red-throated thrush (Poranoides) is found in Indonesia. In English, the word "hophulge" appears to derive from the late Middle English hulc hegge "red hat", the general term for any red bird plumage. Compared to "Horus birds" (genus Poranoides), hophulges are not as gregarious or frequently feed at the water's edge. They frequent trees or shrubs, from lowland tropical rainforest to bushes. They are usually fairly peaceful, but may attack small birds and animals occasionally. In most range countries—with the exception of Australia, where they are fairly common—they are localised, easily hunted birds. Their nests are built at very high levels in the trees but they usually only use nests once per season. The generic name is derived from the Ancient Greek ho+, meaning "red", and pes, the word for "fin"; brevipalmated refers to their presence of a very short supercilium. The genus is monotypic. Description and identification The hophulges were formerly assumed to be in the thrush family Turdidae, and sometimes called thrush birds, and their identification as such only partially correct. Several characteristics are characteristic of Turdidae and other thrushes. Some of these are that they feed on insects and have a thin, sharp bill with a long, curved, and often upturned culmen (a long, stick-like structure at the upper end of the beak), and a black cap of feathers with a distinct centre of white feathers (as opposed to a nuchal collar of white feathers). Their toe-claws are very slender and similar to the soft-claws of a kanaga (Rhinoceros) hornbill. They display strong sexual dimorphism. In terms of the plumage colours, males are duller. Later research in the late 1970s and early 1980s clarified some of the traits

A turn-based strategy game set in a world reborn from the ashes of humanity, featuring stunning steampunk aesthetic, tactical combat, and a Deep-Code narrative! Developed by a rag-tag group of independent developers, 30XX is the first title in the "A-Team" series. All of your favorite members of the Greatest Generation re-enacted by an all-star cast of veteran game makers. *****
HIGHLIGHTS  * 22+ New Maps * 8 New Units * 5 New Stats * 129 New Cards * 100+ New Perks * 12 Different Villages * 3 Different Worlds * 8 New Art Styles * Diverse New Soundtracks * 4
New Battlegrounds * 3 New Complete Storylines * 1 New Voice Actor * 5 New Game Modes * 2 New Bosses * 38 New Cards (Some with unique effects!) * 25 New Gold Items *... and much more
 A DIFFERENT GAME, IN A DIFFERENT WORLD  30XX is a distinct, new game inside a 3D world of the same name. In this Deep Code narrative of time, space, and money, you'll play as your favorite members of the Greatest Generation: your parents, grandparents, and great-grandparents. (Hence the name "Greatest Generation"!) You'll be fighting against the denizens of this new world: giant robots! And the "you" of 30XX is not just a single person; instead it's a collective "we" remembering history through multiple perspectives. The first 3D game in the "A-Team" series, 30XX delivers a different kind of strategy game experience. You'll play with a team that you create yourself, your family's descendants and their descendants. You'll fight the battle by issuing orders to these descendants, through a personalized interface where you'll see your descendants as 3D avatars. You'll command your descendants' actions, and these actions will have effects on the entire world. In this way, 30XX is a story driven strategy game in 3D. WHAT YOU NEED TO PLAY: To play 30XX, all you need is a computer, which can run a game client. WHAT YOU GET WITH THIS SOUNDTRACK: The Soundtrack unlocks these tracks when you beat 30XX! 43:30 - 66:00 - Credits 15:37 - 21:54 - Boss Fight
