Windows 7, Windows
8/8.1, Windows 10 and Windows . We've said this time and again, but it's still a good time to remind you that any fitness tracker worth its salt is going to measure your workouts. Even the cheapest ones will track your runs, swimming and weightlifting. The more expensive ones can track calories too. They'll even give you updates, unless you switch them off and use the alerts instead. So, how much do they cost? To start with, we'd recommend the Fitbit Charge, a decent sports tracker which will track your work out and cost £99.99. The more expensive Fitbit Blaze track your distance, speed and calories burned and is roughly double the Charge's price. If you're more of an all-rounder, then perhaps Garmin's Vector 2 is worth a look. It's probably the most feature rich trackers, with a heart rate monitor, stress and sleep tracking. The Garmin device normally runs £169.99, but can be found for £149.99 if you find a retailer who'll drop the price. And if you're after more portable options, then a step counter will fit easily into your bag or pocket. Our favourites include the Fitbit Zip (£99) and the Misfit Shine (£79.99). The Misfit Shine claims to have “the brightest screen in the business” and has a built-in camera and a 5-megapixel camera so you can take photos. It also has a heart rate monitor, sleep tracker, a built-in accelerometer and even music from Pandora. 6d1f23a050
